WEF Roundup: Digital IDs Can Track the Unvaccinated, AI Can Speed Up Development of New Vaccines

The annual meeting of the World Economic Forum wrapped up this week with calls for digital IDs, rapid development of new vaccines, more partnerships with corporate media outlets like The New York Times, and widespread acceptance and proliferation of artificial intelligence in all areas of society, including healthcare and education.

The threat of a new pandemic and so-called "misinformation." The future of democracy. The future impact of artificial intelligence (AI) in society. The "green agenda."

These were just some of the topics on the agenda at the annual meeting of the World Economic Forum (WEF) in Davos, Switzerland, which concluded today.

Some of the highlights of this year's meeting included warnings of how a yet-unknown "Disease X" may cause the next pandemic, discussions on how AI could lead to the rapid development of new vaccines, and talk about how AI could either fall victim to — or filter out — so-called "misinformation" and "disinformation."

'We don't want to wait a year before we get the vaccine'

Warnings were accompanied by more optimistic — from the perspective of the meeting's participants — outlooks about the role AI could play in tackling future pandemics, such as through the rapid development of new vaccines.

Jeremy Hunt, the U.K.'s chancellor of the Exchequer, said during a Thursday panel discussion — in which Pfizer CEO Albert Bourla participated — that "when we have the next pandemic, we don't want to have to wait a year before we get the vaccine."

"If AI can shrink the time it takes to get that vaccine to a month, then that is a massive step forward for humanity," Hunt said.

Digital ID 'very necessary' for tracking the unvaccinated

During another Thursday panel discussion, Queen Máxima of the Netherlands said that digital ID is "very necessary" for the provision of a range of public services — and suggested that it can be used to track the unvaccinated.

Digital ID "is very necessary for financial services, but not only. It is also good for school enrollment, it is also good for health — who actually got a vaccination or not," she said.

Bourla elaborated on the possibilities he sees for AI in the realm of healthcare.

Answering a question from CNN journalist Fareed Zakaria, Bourla said, "Our job is to make breakthroughs that change patients' lives. With AI, I can do it faster and I can do it better."

One example identified by Bourla was the role AI played in developing Paxlovid, a prescription oral medication marketed as a treatment for COVID-19.

"It was developed in four months," Bourla said, whereas development of such a drug "usually takes four years." He said AI helped significantly reduce the amount of time needed for the "drug discovery" process, where "You really synthesize millions of molecules and then you try to discover within them, which one works."

He credited this breakthrough with saving "millions of lives."

"I truly believe that we are about to enter a scientific renaissance in life sciences because of this coexistence of advancements in technology and biology," Bourla said. "AI is a very powerful tool. In the hands of bad people [it] can do bad things for the world, but in the hands of good people [it] can do great things for the world."

World Health Organization Director-General Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus warned on Wednesday during the "Preparing for Disease X" panel discussion that the world must prepare for a future pandemic, which may be caused by a yet-unknown "Disease X."

Panelists warned that "Disease X" — which is included in the WHO's list of "priority diseases" — could "result in 20 times more fatalities than the coronavirus pandemic."

Aside from "Disease X," Tedros and other participants on the panel also discussed the need for a "pandemic agreement" and the urgency of having it approved at this year's World Health Assembly, to be held between May 27 and June 1 in Geneva.

'We're going to have digital doctors, digital people'

During the "Technology in a Turbulent World" panel, panelists offered predictions as to other ways in which AI is likely to become integrated into people's lives.

Marc Benioff, chair and CEO of Salesforce, said that while "AI is really not at a point where we're replacing human beings, it's really at a point where we're augmenting them."

He cited, as hypothetical examples, the possibility that WEF participants could ask an AI application such as ChatGPT "what's some good questions I could ask" during their panel, or that radiologists could use AI "to help read my CT scan into my MRI."

"We're just about to get to that breakthrough where we're going to go, 'Wow, it's almost like it's a digital person,'" Benioff said. However, reflecting the theme of this year's WEF meeting — "Rebuilding Trust" — he added, "When we get to that point, we're going to ask ourselves, 'Do we trust it?'"

"We're going to have digital doctors, digital people, these digital people are going to merge and there's going to have to be a level of trust," Benioff said.

Similarly, Sam Altman, CEO of OpenAI — which maintains a partnership with Microsoft — said that AI will help "everyone's job … operate at a little bit higher of a level of abstraction."

"We will all have access to a lot more capability and we'll still make decisions. They may trend more towards curation over time, but we'll make decisions about what should happen in the world," he said.

Julie Sweet, chair and CEO of Accenture, also expressed optimism over AI's future role, saying that AI is "massively going to improve social services."

RFK Jr. and Brian Hooker's New Book: "Vax-Unvax" ORDER NOW

To build "trust," Benioff called for more regulation, alluding to the social media ecosystem and "misinformation" on such platforms.

"We have to also turn to those regulators and say, 'Hey, if you look at social media over the last decade, it's been kind of a fing st show.' It's pretty bad. We don't want that in our AI industry. We want to have a good healthy partnership with these moderators and with these regulators."

Altman suggested that one way to develop such "partnerships" is to train AI to locate and identify information from certain preferred sources.

He said:

> "What we want to do with the content owners, like The New York Times and deals that we have done with many other publishers, and we'll do more over time, is when a user says, 'Hey, ChatGPT, what happened at Davos today?,' we would like to display content, link out, show brands of places like The New York Times or the Wall Street Journal or any other great publication and say, 'Here's what happened today. Here's this real-time information.'"

Bourla also called for more regulation of AI, saying that while he was "certain right now that the benefits clearly outweigh the risks," he feels "we need regulation right now."

Hunt, however, said that minimal regulation is the best approach at this time.

"I think we need to be light touch because … it's such an emerging stage. You can kill the golden goose before it has a chance to grow," he said.

AI could be used to educate students about 'misinformation'

WEF leaders also addressed the future role of AI in education, in particular during the WEF's "Education Meets AI" panel on Thursday.

According to Forbes, panelists, including government officials from Slovenia and the United Arab Emirates, suggested that AI will provide "novel opportunities for deeply personalized learning and tutoring."

Ahmad bin Abdullah Humaid Belhoul Al Falasi, minister of education of the United Arab Emirates, called this "democratic tutoring," suggesting that AI would provide "scalable" tutoring "available to all" outside the classroom, which will supplement classroom teaching and which "leaves the hardest part — the soft skills — to teachers."

Nzinga Qunta, an anchor with the South African Broadcasting Corporation, suggested that such tutoring would not be restricted in terms of age or physical space.

Panelists also provided reassurances that AI would not lead to the elimination of human jobs — but suggested that people won't lose their jobs due to AI "but by people who know how to use AI," Forbes reported.

The "risk of mis- and disinformation" was also highlighted during the discussion, with panelists suggesting that "critical thinking" can enable students to identify the "hazardous" risks of "misinformation" and "disinformation."

'Misinformation' can lead to 'civil unrest'

"Misinformation" was indeed highly prominent on the agenda of this year's WEF meeting. The WEF's Global Risks Report, released Jan. 10, named "misinformation" and "disinformation" derived from AI as the top risk facing the world over the next two years, and the fifth-highest risk over the next decade.

According to the report, "Foreign and domestic actors alike will leverage misinformation and disinformation to widen societal and political divides" in the next two years, posing a risk to elections in countries such as the U.S., U.K. and India and a risk of "civil unrest" across the world.

"What's more, false information and societal polarization are inherently intertwined, with potential to amplify each other," according to Saadia Zahidi, the WEF's managing director, for which "innovation and trustworthy decision-making" are required. However, she said this "is only possible in a world with alignment on the facts."

'There is a risk the wrong leaders are elected'

The WEF's warnings about the "threat" of "misinformation" and "disinformation" is closely aligned with fears expressed by WEF meeting participants regarding how AI could impact democracy and the electoral process.

In recent days, a video went viral on social media showing WEF co-founder and chairman Klaus Schwab in a discussion with Sergey Brin, co-founder and former president of Google. Schwab suggested a hypothetical scenario where "you do not even have to have elections anymore" because AI "can already predict the winner" — a scenario Brin did not explicitly dismiss.

Even though that video was frequently presented in social media posts as originating from this year's WEF meeting, it is actually from a discussion at the WEF's annual meeting in 2017. Yet, other statements at this year's meeting also referenced elections and governance.

During a panel discussion today on "Global Risks: What's in the Mail?" Haslinda Amin, Bloomberg News' chief international correspondent for Southeast Asia, suggested "there is a risk the wrong leaders are elected" in this year's elections in key countries.

Responding to Amin, Douglas L. Peterson, president and CEO of S&P Global, said this "is one of the top risks for this year" and added, "We also need to make sure we stay engaged through global institutions, like the UN, like NATO."

And during his special address at the WEF meeting, António Guterres, the United Nation's secretary-general, called for "effective mechanisms of global governance" as part of "a new multipolar global order."

Building 'international economic order' required to tackle 'climate crisis'

Numerous WEF meeting participants also warned about the risks posed by climate change — and used the opportunity to call for more money and investments for "green" initiatives.

Speaking earlier this week at the WEF meeting, John Kerry, U.S. special presidential envoy for climate, said 2023 "was literally the most disruptive, climate-disrupted, most climate consequential, negative year in human history," and that as a result, there is no more "space for debate or, frankly, procrastination any longer."

To respond to this, WEF meeting participants said more money is needed. For instance, Tharman Shanmugaratnam, president of Singapore, said "governments are going to have to invest significantly more than they've invested before."

The price tag for such interventions, according to Christine Lagarde, president of the European Central Bank, is "no less than 620 billion per year to actually move the green transition further."

These people will not stop at scheming of ways to depopulate the planet. From new drugs and vaccines that kill, to not only forecasting a pandemic but actually planning another to to implement killer vaccine uptake. I wonder why these people are so deluded that they actually believe that they are better than the rest of us? If they were aware that all life is interconnected, would they then realize that what they do to others they are actually doing to themselves? I have my doubts, but this is how the universe really works.

The problem is that the Elite think that the rest of us, who previously worked for them and created the industrial age and worked in their factories, are now "Useless Eaters" or "Human Garbage" because we don't have the understanding or technology to keep up with the times and their assumed new world order where everything, pretty much, is automatic, controlled by computers and technology and now AI, which is scheduled to replace "most" office workers jobs mid 2024. Take Hyundai cars for example - metal goes in one end and built functioning cars comes out the other end and no human intervention necessary. Hyundai had a book for suggestions which their human component could file ideas to save the company money and earn a financial reward and one worker came up with the idea that the computers and machines which automatically create these cars don't need the lights on - that idea was an outstanding success, because he was right, they don't.

King Charles III came up with the idea of The Great Reset and the idea of the elite is to reduce our human populations considerably and my guess is that the vaccines were their way to do that and so far, my guess does not seem to be far off base.

What gets me is that it was a voluntary thing. Everyone could refuse to have the vaccines as I did, but the methods of nudging they used were subtle and played on our emotions and they still play on my mind, when I think of them - it takes more than their nudging to sway me when I have a simple cure for any virus

Yes - but using a neti-pot is like using a garden hose to put out a house fire, not a fire hose, which my method is - because you really need to get the salt water throughout your nasal passages and just not local to your neti-pot. Still your life, your choice - why do you think we were equipped with hands, before neti-pots were invented?

When I was a kid at school 1952-1967 we were taught "Coughs and Sneezes Spread Diseases, Catch Your Germs In Your Handkerchief" which I have always done and still do, to this day - I'm late 70's now.
I hope you get a viral Covid = Cold and then you can tell everyone you are not ill and it does not exist and you have no explanation for feeling as sick as a dog with a high temperature - how's that?

This radiacal insanity in regard to vaccines shouold not be occuring.. Greed has everything to do with it. Intelligence has been left out of the entire equation. . It Reminds me of the story of the Emperor's New Clothes...nothing but sham. People are so impressed with the word doctor. Sixty-one years ago I learned medical doctors were human. I trusted my son's pediatrician to my detriment. The vaccines my son was given nearly killed him; and the foods I was advised to feed him; set him up for hyperactivity and tranquilizers. It set me on a course to study health and nutrition myself. In doing so, I came across information related to the Immune System and questioning the use of vaccines. There are lymph glands throughout the body which produce white corpuscles. When a foreign protein enters the bloodstream, these glands produce massive amounts of corpuscles to attack and wipe out this matter, which does not belong. It could be bacteria, poor quality food, or anything which endangers human health. My questions : How can injecting matter directly into the bloodstream create immunity, when white corpuscles were designed by our Creator to clear it out of the bloodstream? For example, aluminum, mercury aand fluoride are toxic...and they were used in vaccines given children for generations. They were known to cause brain damage. For example, mercury caused Mad Hatter;s Disease in the early 1900s. Women who worked in the hat-making industry used mercury and wound up going mad. Why didn't doctors question the use of matter such as this being in vaccines? Aluminum was known in the fifties as creating brain damage, I was sent an article in 1957 on this. Also knew about formaldehyde being used in embaming corpses If I had known back in the fities these items were in vaccines...i would never have permitted the doctor to give him one shot. About ten year ago, I came across a book, which listed the substances in vaccines: Vaccination is not Immunization by Dr. Tim O'Shea. Every caring parent shouldd do their own research and know what is in vaccines. Doctors really don"t know as much as people think. Most doctors receive their drug/vaccine info from Big Pharma's reps.

But you have to destroy millions (but I say billions) to save a few, isn't that how these things are supposed to work?

What gets me is life after death. There is a reported case of this boy who could remember his last life as a snake. He bit a man on his shoulder and the man killed him, this snake and he was reborn as this boy. The researchers found the man who said he killed a snake which bit him on his shoulder, verifying the boys story - neither knew the other.
Those behind these vaccines have to die sometime and when they do their spirit goes over the other side, where it is unlikely to be received with accolades for having exterminated most of the human race, by their vaccines and the possibility of other Spirits waiting to come over and become new babies, as their own new life, still being possible - like the boy above.
My guess is these "invisible to us" people, involved in these vaccines in any way (which includes my Doctor, who to all intents and purposes is Big Pharma's Representative first) are going to Hell for eternity and I hope I get to have my way with them after I die, because payback is a bitch and they have earned it - not vaccinated me.

Yes, I wasn't clear, the listeners are hypnotized, they are not paid, but yes, the pharma ads fund big media.

The evil psychopaths and their minions continue to reveal their true colors. Via rules for thee, but not for thee. Using AI to create a vaccine within one month. Of course this suits control and depopulation agenda purposes. Krampus Schwab admitted to using AI to not have elections, but this would select their candidate of choice. Gee, isn't what's been happening with all of these Presidents and others within the Government and other institutions? What they are all have in common is they are all WEF members, Trump included. Pay attention to their actions that speak louder than words. The same applies with the Digital ID, EV's, and CBDC, are used for control purposes. That's why if voting really made a difference, the controllers wouldn't allow us to do it. Don't forget mankind will always desire control and power at all costs. The order followers will continue to obey orders no matter how evil they are.
Without our consent, these evil bastards can't implement their agendas. Now, they are in panic mode and continue to reveal themselves and which is why they are pushing for more "censorship" campaigns to silence "free speech" because this reveals the truth about their evil deeds that continue to be exposed as sunlight is the best disinfectant.

Consciousness is in an ongoing struggle with unconsciousness and has many defeats. Currently we are on the down spiral.

I keep thinking, "GIGO" - Garbage In, Garbage Out.

And you can interpret that in any number of ways.

How many times do we need to tell them all to f off and die, before they take notice?

If you watch 'The Gilded Age' you will see a similar dynamic between the robber barons and the workers and the unions. Might is right in this world, that is how it plays out.

Dear BOO WHO and WEF - I think I can speak for the majority of humanity when I say - You can take all your current AND future vaccines and shove them right up your A$$. Let's see.. There's less than 100 of you at your little summit and billions around the world ready to crush you and your f-ed up ideas. I say - bring it..

It didn't take much to control those billions with a virus with a low mortality rate. What they will bring on next will enslave us all.

A prerequisite to enslaving us, they first need to bring the economy down to make most of us bankrupt, homeless, & desperate. They will attempt to starve us. They will thus divide the citizenry into the haves & the have-nots. This situation will cause the haves & have-nots to be at odds with each other & a battle will thus ensue between ourselves, while the tyrants hide safely in their havens, monitoring the progress of their scheme. The aftermath of this situation is that everyone will be made equally desperate. Then, the tyrants will step in with a "solution", which most everyone will be coerced into accepting, especially because of the dire circumstances that they are confronted with. THEN we will be enslaved, IF they are successful with their scheme.

AI must be resisted at ALL COSTS. If you think that mRNA technology is bad, AI will make it look heavenly. I'm an IT expert with 43 years of expertise and I can tell you that this kind of thing can and will be set up to be bias. Just imagine this scenario: AI becomes fully accepted through generations and at some point, it becomes some kind of holy grail, a elite God if you like, thus whatever it says, goes. Well, you had better believe that AI will be exactly what the globalists want it to be, in all ways. There will be only one narrative and that will be what AI will respond to, nothing else. PERIOD. They're already pushing it as hard as they can: Both the MacOS and Windows are hell bent on incorporating it in their operating systems; You can bet it's coming to every phone OS as well. You think censorship is bad now, If and/or when AI comes to town, everything and anything not wanted by the "Owners" will not be seeable or doable. Nothing. This has to be stopped at all costs.

AI will dictate the parameters, and like it or not we will be bound by them. AI will in effect be the scapegoat. But the reality is that AI is just parroting back what it was programmed to do. The "Owners", who are actually in control, are thus vindicated for the laws they pass to implement the AI dictates. Fun times are around the horizon, and it won't take generations, but only one generation maximum.

Chrystia Freeland reminds me of one of the "Alien" movies. That woman is possessed! Mark my words…both TURDeau and "'free"land (WEF minions) will take Canada down into the pit of HELL - where they both come from! The EVIL is only beginning!
